PENCE LEAVES GAME AFTER PLAYERS KNEEL

I Vice President Mike Pence walked out of an NFL game in his home state of Indiana after some players knelt during the national anthem, a form of demonstration that began last year as a symbolic protest about police violence against racial minorities. Pence was attending a game between the Indianapolis Colts and the San Francisco 49ers. Some players from the 49ers knelt during the Star Spangled Banner, while some Colts wore black T-shirts with the words "We Will" on the front and "Stand for equality, justice, unity, respect, dialogue, opportunity" on the back. The players stood with their arms locked during the anthem, according to media reports. "I left today's Colts game because President Trump and I will not dignify any event that disrespects our soldiers, our flag, or our national anthem," Pence said in a statement.

IRAN WARNS US AGAINST IMPOSING SANCTIONS

2 Iran warned the United States against designating its Revolutionary Guards Corp as a terrorist group and said U.S. regional military bases would be at risk if further sanctions were passed. The warning came after the White House said on Friday that President Trump would announce new U.S. responses to Iran's missile tests, support for "terrorism" and cyberoperations as part of his new Iran strategy.

"As we've announced in the past, if America's new law for sanctions is passed, this country will have to move their regional bases outside the 2,000 km range of Iran's missiles," Guards' commander Mohammad Ali Jafari said, according to state media. Jafari also said that additional sanctions would end the chances for future dialogue with the United States, according to state media, and issued a stark warning to American troops.

5 THINGS YOU NEED TO KNOW

TRUMP DERIDES CORKER FOR IRAN DEAL

4 President Donald Trump blamed Sen. Bob Corker for the Iran nuclear deal in a series of derisive Twitter posts that drew a sharp comeback from the lawmaker, an influential fellow Republican and onetime ally. The senator, who announced his retirement last month, was a national security adviser to Trump during the 2016 presidential campaign and on Trump's short list last year for both vice president and secretary of state. More recently, he has criticized Trump, taking issue with the president's response to a white supremacist demonstration in Charlottesville, Virginia, in August. Critics assailed Trump for saying rival protesters were also to blame for violence. "Sen. Bob Corker 'begged' me to endorse him for re-election in Tennessee. I said 'NO' and he dropped out [said he could not win without my endorsement]," Trump wrote.

DRUG CHAINS TUMBLE ON AMAZON REPORTS

5 Shares of drug retailers Walgreens Boots Alliance Inc., CVS Health Corp. and Rite Aid Corp. tumbled after reports that Amazon.com Inc. was looking to make a move into selling drugs online. Amazon is reported to be in discussions with mid-market pharmacy benefit managers and has been hiring talent to assess the drug retailing market for its entry, brokerage firm Leerink analyst Ana Gupta wrote in a note to clients. "We are convinced that AMZN will almost certainly enter the drug distribution value chain within two years, evolving into a more disruptive offering over time," Gupta said. Amazon's entry into pharmaceuticals has been long rumored in the media. CNBC reported that the e-commerce giant would decide before Thanksgiving whether to move into selling prescription drugs online.

POLL

A poll from The Associated Press-NORC Center for Public Affairs Research finds that nearly 70 percent say Trump isn't level-headed, and majorities say he's neither honest nor a strong leader.

BEEN INJURED?

AUTO ACCIDENTS • SEPTA ACCIDENTS • LIQUOR LIABILITY • MEDICAL MALPRACTICE

Did You Know?

Dram Shop laws hold servers of alcoholic beverages legally responsible for harm that visibly intoxicated patrons cause to others. State liquor liability laws can apply not only to bars, liquor stores and restaurants, but also to social clubs and private events where liquor is served. The laws also include selling liquor without a license, selling liquor after hours and selling liquor to minors.

If a person is served alcoholic beverages while visibly intoxicated, and then gets into an accident injuring someone while driving drunk, the owner of the serving establishment can be held responsible in addition to the drunk driver.

Dram Shop lawsuits aren't limited to auto accidents — if a bar serves a visibly intoxicated person who then starts a fistfight and seriously injures another patron, that patron could sue the bar under the dram shop law.

In order to successfully sue under the dram shop law, you must be able to prove:

1. An employee of an establishment served alcohol to someone at a time that that person was visibly intoxicated and,
2. The business or host's decision to serve alcohol to the visibly intoxicated person directly led to the injuries.

If you feel that you or a loved one have been injured as a result of a Dram Shop violation, call us at (215) 569-1212 to explore whether you may have the right to recover full compensation for your injuries.

Reformer candidates on the ballot this Election Day

Everything you need to know about Philly's upcoming election.

SAM NEWHOUSE
@scnewhouse
sam.newhouse@metro.us

Philadelphia will be heading to the polls on Nov. 7, voting on two citywide offices: controller, essentially the city's accountant, and district attorney, the city's chief law enforcement officer.

Read on for what you need to know about the various candidates.

Civil rights and defense lawyer Larry Krasner won the Democratic primary for DA as former DA Seth Williams was facing federal corruption charges. He will face longtime prosecutor and Republican candidate Beth Grossman.

Current City Controller Alan Butkovitz lost the Democratic primary to upstart challenger

Rebecca Rhynhart, a former Wall Street trader, who will be running against Republican Mike Tomlinson.

While Democratic voters heavily outnumber Republicans in Philly, making Democratic victory in both races all but inevitable, there is an election to be had and issues to be debated. Read on to see where the candidates stand on various issues.

DA's race

Larry Krasner — D Krasner built a grassroots campaign, picked up massive financial support from George Soros (who has funded criminal justice reform initiatives across the U.S.), and ended up getting endorsements from many black activists and national attention for his focus on issues like not over-prosecuting nonviolent drug crime offenders, ending stop and frisk, stopping cash

"I've done about as much as I can do from the outside to push for justice. ... We're the most incarcerated nation in the world. It's time to go in a different direction."

Larry Krasner, candidate for DA

bail and a general policy of "decarceration."

"For 30 years, I've watched this DA's office go in the wrong direction," Krasner previously told Metro. "I've done about as much as I can do from the outside to push for justice. ... We're the most incarcerated nation in the world. It's time to go in a different direction."

Beth Grossman — R Grossman worked in the DA's office from 1993 until 2015, and she left because of concerns over the conduct that would eventually get her former boss, disgraced ex-DA and convicted felon Seth Williams, tossed into federal prison for up to five years. Grossman pledged to restore accountability to the DA's office. She has a conservative stance on most law and order issues, opposes sanctuary city policies and wants to save the city money. In combatting opioid abuse, she supports safe needle injection sites. She asked the public to take a fair view of her policies.

"I want the public to be informed and to look at me beyond the label 'Republican,'" she previously told Metro. "Take an objective look at me."

City controller's race

Rebecca Rhynhart — D Rebecca Rhynhart worked for Bear Sterns until 2008, then as Philadelphia city treasurer, as budget director under mayors Nutter and Kenney, and as Kenney's chief administrative officer until last December. She decided to run for Philadelphia City Controller after Donald Trump's election, and in the Democratic primary, she defeated incumbent Alan Butkovitz (around whom rumors have since begun swirling about a possible mayoral campaign as he takes an increasingly tough stance on Kenney's soda tax).

"After November, I knew I had to jump in and run for office," Rhynhart told Metro. "We need to be more efficient than ever with our financial resources."

Mike Tomlinson — R Tomlinson, of Northeast Philly, is a certified public accountant and Temple graduate who taught in the School District of Philadelphia. His campaign website only states, "More information coming soon!" but in recent Facebook posts, he claimed that the city's new five-year budget plan does not include the funds to pay for city workers' coming contracts.

"If the corrupt city government would just eliminate the waste, mismanagement, fraud and corruption, there would be sufficient resources to pay for these new contracts," Tomlinson wrote. "Instead, there will be cutbacks in city services."

GUN CONTROL

NRA opposes US ban on bump-stock devices used by Las Vegas killer

The powerful U.S. gun lobbyist group the National Rifle Association said on Sunday it would oppose an outright ban on bump-stock devices that the killer in the Las Vegas massacre of 58 people used to turn rifles into automatic weapons and strafe a crowd with bursts of sustained gunfire.

The NRA, which has seldom embraced new firearms-control measures, stunned gun control advocates last week when it issued a statement voicing willingness to support a restriction on bump stocks.

On Sunday, the organization said it was open to regulation but opposed any legislation banning the devices.

"We don't believe that bans have ever worked on anything. What we have said has been very clear — that if something transfers a semiautomatic to function like a fully automatic, then it ought to be regulated differently," Chris Cox, the NRA's chief lobbyist, said on "Fox News Sunday."

Cox and Wayne LaPierre, the NRA's chief executive, accused the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives under former President Barack Obama of paving the way for the use of bump stocks and creating legal confusion about their usage.

President Donald Trump was an outspoken advocate of gun rights during his 2016 campaign for the White House. The NRA spent more than $30 million in support of his candidacy.

Several Republican lawmakers suggested last week that they were receptive to legislation to curb the use of bump stocks.

But House Majority Whip Steve Scalise, a Republican who was nearly killed by a gunman at a baseball practice, was cautious on Sunday.

"I do think it's a little bit early for people to say they know what to do to fix this problem," he said on NBC's "Meet the Press." REUTERS

Vegan food truck owner praises deaths of 'carnist' Las Vegas victims

Delinda Jensen of Wilkes-Barre welcomed the deaths of the 58 "meat eater" shooting victims, saying the mass murder saved the lives of animals.

MORGAN ROUSSEAU

morgan@metro.us

A vegan food truck owner who scolded the victims of the Las Vegas shooting massacre as "meat eaters" says she's received death threats for her comments.

Delinda Jensen, 60, of Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania wrote on Facebook, "How many animals will live" because of the deaths of the 58 victims, the Times Leader reported. Jensen made the post on Monday night, a day after the deadliest mass shooting in modern U.S. history killed the concertgoers and injured more than 500 others.

Jensen reportedly wrote, "Yes I am jaded. Fifty-nine meat eaters dead. How many animals will live because of this?"

She included the gunman, Stephen Paddock, in the death toll. Jensen also posted that she didn't "give a f-k about carnists anymore."

Since then, Jensen said she was forced to apologize, delete her Facebook account, close her business, Mother Nature Vegan Cuisine, and hide her food truck.

Jensen later told the Times Leader the post was a result of a "moment of stupidity."

"Was it poorly written? Absolutely. Do I regret it? Yes. I am so sorry I wrote that," she told the paper. "Meat eaters or not, no one deserves to die like that. I wasn't celebrating the death of those people."

In an interview with Fox 56, Jensen again said she regretted her statements but attempted to explain her reasoning for the Facebook post.

"It is a known fact that if you are a vegan, that you save 155 to 200 animals a year by being a vegan," she told the news station. "And being an analytical person that I am, I went, 'Okay. How many animals will not have to needlessly suffer?'"

Several of the "As Seen on TV" products sold by Top Dog Direct. PROVIDED

Philly-area marketer rides the $350B 'As Seen on TV' gravy train

America's love affair with gadgets is going global.

CASSIE HEPLER
@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

Laugh all you want at those crazy TV commercials touting the latest and greatest gadgets, but the As Seen on TV industry is a $350 billion market.

For more than 30 years, Trevoze, Pennsylvania, marketer Bill McAlister, CEO of Top Dog Direct, has been laughing all the way to the bank with some of the most popular As Seen on TV creations, including Mighty Putty, BeActive Brace, Spray Perfect, Futzuki, Stream Clean, Urine Gone and Sobokawa Cloud Pillow. Top Dog Direct even went to the Mojave Desert to pull a plane using a Mighty Putty product.

The key to a successful As Seen on TV (ASOT) product is that it solves a common problem, reaches mass audiences and retails for less than $20, with enthralling televised demonstrations. But Americans want to know: Are all these magical inventions made in China?

"The manufacturing is done here [in the U.S.] to use only FDA-approved facilities and shorten the supply chain," McAlister said. "For more labor-intensive products, they are made overseas. Health and beauty items are primarily made in the United States."

ASOT stores, like the one at King of Prussia Mall, are a very small part of the retail channel for TV items, with 500 or so stores. The mass retailers — Walmart, Target, Bed Bath & Beyond and Walgreens — are where 95 percent of TV items are sold.

America's greatest assets are its entrepreneurial spirit and economic freedom, making it an inventors' paradise, according to McAlister. What about all the naysayers who claim it's a bunch of cheaply made plastic crap?

"Top Dog Direct has a very low return rate of less than 5 percent. We sell quality goods," McAlister said. "Because of the high cost of media and product, any company that does sell inferior goods is quickly out of business. We have extensive QA [quality assurance] procedures and monitor customer returns closely. ... The cost versus the retail price of individual products is strictly confidential. Depending on the item, it can vary approximately 25 percent."

Just like every industry has its renegades that sometimes go rogue, so does this one. For instance, the Slap Chop/Shamwow products used to be hawked on popular TV ads by a guy who wound up in jail for beating a person. But others have more inspirational stories, like the Hot Buns mom.

Taylor Baldwin is a single mother of four daughters living her dream in San Diego, thanks in part to Top Dog Direct. Her invention, beauty product Hot Buns, was a hit.

"I knew hair buns were making a comeback and knew women had a hard time making them. There was also a trend to cut up and roll men's socks to help make a perfect bun. So, I came up with a device that would help make a perfect bun in seconds, and any girl could do it," Baldwin said. "I was blessed to have much success with my first invention — but I have also failed with others, and there are many more products in the pipeline."

Products are made anywhere from China to America, she said.

"Sure, there's crap out there, but for the most part, the products are not crap," Baldwin said. "They solve some sort of challenge for the masses."

For those who think they have the next great invention, take some words of advice from the master marketer himself.

"For those special problem solvers, research to see if it has already been invented. Often it has. If not," he said, "create a prototype and test it thoroughly to make sure that it works quickly and easily, then bring it to Top Dog Direct, and we can create the next TV hit."

TRUMP'S AMERICA

WORST AIM EVER IN THE DC CORRAL

There is never a right time, it seems, to save lives from gun violence.

Another mass murder by gunfire, another paralyzed response from our political class: They're shooting blanks again in Washington.

Donald Trump blames "pure evil," which is his way of saying there's nothing anyone can do to try and stop it. On Capitol Hill, the only thing Republicans and Democrats can agree on is that — maybe, maybe — a device called a bump stock, which can turn a semi-automatic AR-15 assault rifle into a fully automatic machine gun, might be regulated somehow. Las Vegas shooter Stephen Paddock had a dozen of those in his hotel room.

But regulated how? When? And with what gaping loopholes? Even those basic questions have quickly devolved into the usual platitude that it's far too soon to take any practical steps. There is never a right time, it seems, to save lives from gun violence, certainly not when the whole nation is riveted to the latest massacre.

The debate never changes, only the names and the geography.

This time, for reasons unknown, a 64-year-old professional gambler fatally shot 58 country music fans on the Las Vegas strip, injuring more than 500 others in a 10-minute burst of bump-stock fire. Next week or next month, it will be someone and somewhere else.

In dumbed-down Washington, the debate is instantly personified as Gabby Giffords versus Steve Scalise, two lawmakers who are themselves victims of horrible gun violence. One being an Arizona Democrat, the other a Louisiana Republican, of course they can't agree on anything, despite their similarly grievous experiences. Giffords was shot in 2011 while meeting with constituents outside a Tucson supermarket. Scalise was shot in Virginia on June 14 when a gunman opened fire on a congressional baseball team.

Since leaving Congress in 2012, Giffords has dedicated her life to promoting common-sense gun regulation. She'd better not expect any help from Steve Scalise. He went on "Meet the Press" on Sunday to announce he is still opposed to new gun laws of any sort. "They only make it harder for law-abiding citizens to own a gun," he declared.

Asked by host Chuck Todd if he believes the Second Amendment right to bear arms is "unlimited," the wounded congressman didn't hesitate a second.

"It is," he answered. "It is."

Climate change is a problem, yes, but we're not paying for it, many Americans indicated in a new survey. ISTOCK

Half of all Americans wouldn't spend one shiny nickel to reverse climate change: Survey

But one out of five Americans said they would be willing to spend at least $100 on the effort.

KIMBERLY M. AQUILINA
@KimESTAqui
kimberly.aquilina@metro.us

Climate change is a problem, but not one we'd pay to fix, said half of Americans surveyed.

About 18 percent, or roughly one in five, of Americans would be willing to spend at least $100 monthly to reverse damage caused by climate change, according to a new survey from the University of Chicago's Energy Policy Institute and the Associated Press-NORC Center for Public Affairs Research.

Half of the participants said they wouldn't drop a nickel on it.

Of the half that would pay, economist and University of Chicago professor Michael Greenstone calculated that the average that contribution would be $30 per month. Greenstone said that would cover damage caused by the electricity sector.

"If half the [respondents] would pay nothing, we're a long way away from getting any carbon tax or policy that costs taxpayers money to deal with climate change," Sam Ori, the executive director of U-Chicago's Energy Policy Institute, told Moneyish in an interview. "What I think this polling shows is that the politics of a carbon tax or policies that would cost money to deal with climate change — we're not necessarily there yet... You can't get things done with half of the voters in this country."

Climate change is a "problem that the government needs to address" according to 61 percent of Americans surveyed. The percentage is made of 43 percent Republicans and 80 percent Democrats.

"Public opinion around many energy issues tends to be fluid, with people often defaulting to partisan starting points. But this survey shows an opportunity for consensus building through discussion and debate," said Trevor Thompson, director of The AP-NORC Center. "Majorities of both Democrats and Republicans agree that climate change is happening, and there are signs that consensus could happen on other issues, too."

Will the government handle it? Earlier this summer, President Donald Trump announced the United States is leaving the Paris Climate Accords, signed by 195 countries last year, as soon as 2020.

The Trump administration has since said it might rethink the withdrawal if the agreement suited U.S. interests "under the right conditions."

HURRICANE NATE

Hurricane Nate weakens as it soaks Mississippi, Alabama

Hurricane Nate weakened to a tropical depression on Sunday after coming ashore in Mississippi, flooding roads and buildings.

Maximum sustained winds from Nate, the fourth major storm to hit the United States in less than two months, dropped to 35 miles as it moved northeast into Alabama, prompting the National Hurricane Center to end its tropical storm warnings for the region.

The storm made landfall as a Category 1 hurricane, the weakest designation by the center. Only a few hours earlier, its winds had been blowing at 70 mph but appeared to lack the devastating punch of its recent predecessors.

Mississippi Gov. Phil Bryant told reporters there had been no deaths or reports of catastrophic damage. "We are very fortunate this morning and have been blessed," he said.

Nate killed at least 30 people in Central America before entering the warm waters of the Gulf of Mexico and bearing down on the U.S. South. It has also shut down most oil and gas production in the Gulf. REUTERS

Is Uber spying on you? GETTY IMAGES

Uber can secretly record your iPhone screen, but the company doesn't want you to worry about it

A recently discovered special permission granted to Uber by Apple could allow the ride-share app to see your iPhone's screen.

LENYON WHITAKER
@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

A hidden feature in the Uber app could allow the ride-sharing service to record the screen of iPhone users if it wanted to, according to a recent discovery by security researchers.

Mobile app security analyzer Will Strafach detected a special, undocumented permission or "entitlement" granted by Apple that gives the Uber app the ability to spy on your iPhone without you knowing it. The special Apple permission uses features found in iOS11.

According to ZDNet, the hidden feature will allow Uber to "tap into features" of an iPhone or iPad that usually require special permission by Apple to use and Uber seems to be the only third-party app with such permissions.

The specific Apple permission that allows the Uber app to gain access to your iPhone is known as "com.apple.private.allow-explicit-graphics-priority," according to Apple expert Luca Todesco. The entitlement could allow Uber or any other app developer to read or write information to the part of the iPhone that contains pixel and display data. The "writing" part is normal because it is the function that renders graphical information that the user can see, but the "reading" function is the scary part. According to Todesco, "reading allows you to look at the device's screen."

"Essentially it gives you full control over the framebuffer, which contains the colors of each pixel of your screen," Todesco told Gizmodo.

This type of feature or special permission Uber seems to have with Apple could worry many iPhone users, but according to Uber, users have nothing to worry about.

According to tech news site The Next Web, Uber released a statement regarding the recent Apple permission discovery:

"This API isn't connected to anything in our current codebase, meaning it's non-functional and there's no existing feature using it. It was only ever used to render maps for an early version of our Apple Watch app, but has been dormant for quite some time," an Uber representative said to The Next Web. "We are working with Apple to remove it completely ASAP."

In a series of tweets, Todesco alludes to the idea that only big name companies have the ability to get access to these special permissions granted by Apple.

Although it seems that Uber has cleared up all the confusion about the discovered Apple permission granted to their app, it still leaves us wondering what other app developers have these special entitlements that allow them to see our iPhone screens.

Solar-powered cars begin race across

The race from the northern city of Darwin to the southern city of Adelaide is expected to take a week for most cars, with speeds of 55 to 62 mph powered only by the sun.

The World Solar Challenge began on Sunday with 42 solar cars crossing Australia's tropical north to its southern shores, a grueling 1,864-mile race through the outback.

The fastest time was achieved by Japan's Tokai University in 2009, completing the transcontinental race in only 29 hours and 49 minutes.

Belgian team Punch Powertrain started first on Sunday after recording a trial time of 2:03.8 for 1.78 miles, hitting

"All the cars look completely different [this year], and all we know is we've got a good car, we've got it running perfectly the last couple of days and we're confident we're going to do everything to win."

Benninkbolt

an average speed of 51.5 mph.

But reigning 2015 champions Nuon from Delft University of Technology in the Netherlands believes it has a good chance of retaining the prize.

"All the cars look completely different [this year], and all we know is we've got a good car, we've got it running perfectly the last couple of days and we're confident we're going to do everything to win," tour manager Sarah Benninkbolt said Sunday.

Race director Chris Selwood said the biennial event has attracted one of the best fields ever, with teams from more than 40 countries.

"This is the 30th anniversary of the Bridgestone World Solar Challenge and competitors want to be part of that. They have been drawn to the challenge of new regulations which reduced the solar array size without limiting the size of the solar car," Selwood said.

Teams come from countries including the

The Northern Territory Minister for Tourism and Culture, Lauren Moss said her government's A$250,000 (U.S. $194,150) sponsorship of the race showed it was committed to achieving 50 percent renewable energy for the territory by 2030.

"Innovation is at the heart of the event and the technology showcased this year will influence continuing solar innovation for vehicles and householders in the future," she said.

"This event is a great promotion for the NT — it shows our ability to innovate to the world."

Of the worst celebrity neighbor feuds

In the eternal words of the Notorious B.I.G. "Mo' money, mo' problems." At least for these celebs, who have had some intense disagreements with the folks next door. Here are eight of the worst celebrity feuds. Who's the worst? That, friends, is up to you. METRO

GETTY IMAGES

Justin Bieber VS Kristen Bell & Dax Shepard

In 2012, Biebs moved next door to "The Good Place" star Kristen Bell and her husband, actor Dax Shepard. Shepard compared living next to Bieber — with the "music and the parties and the paparazzi" — to living in Lebanon. Uh-huh.

Billy Corgan VS Eric Dane

"The Last Ship" actor Dane said in 2012 that the Smashing Pumpkins frontman ignored warnings about the instability of some trees on his land — and then one of said trees crashed through Dane's roof, nearly killing his wife actress Rebecca Gayheart. Yikes.

Chris Brown VS Nick Young

Remember when Brown maybe threatened a woman in his home with a gun and then his home was surrounded by a SWAT team and police helicopters? The Golden State Warrior made a video begging Brown to GTFO (get the f—k out, y'all!) "Chris Brown, you gotta move," he says, choppers flying overhead. "Please, I like you, man. You my dawg... but go out away from over here... go!"

Justin Theroux VS Norman Resnicow

Actor Theroux filed documents in Manhattan Supreme Court this year claiming that his neighbor, Norman Resnicow, is "compulsively" harassing "The Leftovers" star in his Greenwich Village apartment. The feud has been going on with ages, with Theroux charging that Resnicow ruined his ivy, and Resnicow claiming that Theroux had neglected his dogs. Shocking.

Kathy Griffin VS Jeffrey Mezger

Griffin recently turned to court to get protection from her harassing neighbor, Jeffrey Mezger, who she filed a restraining order against over in September. She alleges that Mezger went on an expletive laced rant against herself and her boyfriend, Randy Bick, after Bick called police to make a noise complaint.

Miley Cyrus VS Steve Carell

Cyrus once recounted living next to "The Office" star Carell by insisting he always gave her the stank eye for her irresponsible driving habits. "The other day I was trying to reverse and I almost hit a thousand things," she said in 2013. "And I was getting nervous because I could see him [crossing his arms and sighing]. I'm like, oh my God, 'Dan in Real Life' is watching me right now!"

Minnie Driver VS Eddie Kaye Thomas

Not only has Driver been involved in a year-long feud with neighbor Daniel Perelmutter; but the "Speechless" actress also once live tweeted another neighbor's drama. When "American Pie" star Eddie Kaye Thomas called the authorities after a female houseguest allegedly pulled a knife on him, Driver described the entire stand off via her Twitter page. Social media melodrama.

Marisa Tomei's parents VS Sean Lennon

The year? 2015. The problem? A tree. Tomei's parents sued Lennon for $10 million, claiming that the spawn of John and Yoko let a rotting ailanthus invade their beautiful townhome — cracking their stoop, breaking their iron railings, and compromising their basement wall. Rude.

Larry David doesn't give a sh*t if you watch 'Curb Your Enthusiasm'

"The wants, desires and needs of the audience have never come up."

GREGORY WAKEMAN
@MetroPhilly
gregory.wakeman@metro.us

It shouldn't come as a surprise to fans, but according to long-time "Curb" collaborator, executive producer and director Jeff Schaffer, "I speak for Larry on this, the wants, desires and needs of the audience have never come up. We couldn't care less. If you told me that Larry was making this for his own shelf, he wouldn't make it any differently."

"It's like working in a comedy biosphere. You don't have to worry about anything in the outside world. You just have to worry about making a funny show."

But, after a six-year absence, how and why did Larry David finally decide to return to "Curb?" Turns out he just needed a little encouragement.

"There was a movie that Larry was thinking of doing and he wanted me to direct it, so we were talking about that," Schaffer recalled.

"But as we were talking about it Larry kept saying, 'That would be funny for 'Curb.' I'll save that for 'Curb.' So, finally I said, 'If you want to do 'Curb,' let's just do 'Curb!' Forget about the movie.'"

David and Schaffer then had to work out how to explain the lengthy gap between seasons. This was when they dreamed up the idea that Larry had been writing a musical about Salman Rushdie getting a Fatwa, which would lead to Larry getting his very own Fatwa, all of which made them "really, really laugh."

"Larry getting a Fatwa seemed right. And it just gave us this season trajectory that was very interesting. And I will say now, even knowing how the season starts, you will never expect how it ends. We're editing the final two now, and I'm just pleased that even though it starts in an insane place, it ends beyond it."

Much has changed since "Curb" began (with a debut in 2000 and seasons in '01, '02, '04, '05, '07, '09, '11 ... and then now) but although Trump and the current social climate dominate cultural conversations, Schaffer admitted, "There are a few jokes here and there based on what's going on," but that doesn't dominate the narrative.

"Curb" is still "Curb" (thank goodness), and its main intention is just to make everybody howl with laughter.

"I think the great thing about Larry is that he sees the petty tree and loses sight of the forest. And in a world where everyone needs to be dealing with these bigger problems, someone has to take care of the petty stuff. Someone has to take care of the minutiae," Schaffer declared.

"I think the world needs a lot of laughter. People always need to laugh. And there's a lot of uncertainty right now. Whatever it is, people are feeling like there isn't an adult in charge, and I think that Larry is going to be the adult."

Oh, without a doubt, we wouldn't want it any other way.

"Curb Your Enthusiasm" season 9 airs on HBO at 10pm EST every Sunday.

On Sunday, Oct. 15, the 31st Annual AIDS Walk Philly takes place along Martin Luther King Drive, beginning at the steps of the Philadelphia Museum of Art. Participants can choose to run or walk the AIDS Fund-produced 5K, which raises funds and awareness for those living with HIV/AIDS in the Philadelphia region.

According to the Philadelphia Department of Health, there are 30,000 people living with HIV/AIDS here, so the cause certainly hits close to home.

"AIDS Fund is striving to reach zero stigma, zero new infections and zero deaths in all the work we do," says AIDS Fund Executive Director Robb Reichard. "I am particularly moved by the number of people AIDS Fund has helped with small grants that assist them through unforeseen financial difficulties that may interfere with their effective health management."

Since 1987, AIDS Walk Philly has raised $17 million in the fight against HIV/AIDS.

In addition to the 5K, the AIDS Memorial Quilt will also be displayed at the event. Each of its 48,000 multi-colored panels represent the life of a person lost to AIDS. According to their website, it's the largest community art project in the world.

In collaboration with the popular online education service edX, Juilliard will now offer six different classes that are open to the public without having to be accepted through their notoriously competitive audition process. ISTOCK

Juilliard will now offer free online courses

Because auditions are so overrated.

PAT KING
@MetroPhilly
patrick.king@metro.us

Who would have thought that one of the most prestigious performing arts schools in the country would now be offering part of its curriculum for free online? That is exactly what the Juilliard School is offering with their new JuilliardX program. In collaboration with the popular online education service edX, Juilliard will now offer six different classes that are open to the public without having to be accepted through their notoriously competitive audition process. What would Miles Davis think if he were alive today?

According to a press release from Juilliard President Joseph W. Polisi, this partnership was a logical no-brainer. "We at Juilliard believe that the development of artists at all levels and ages is an essential part of our responsibility within a global society," he said.

"We are proud to collaborate with edX to present these online courses that share the discipline, intricacy, and subtlety of music-making straight from our world-class faculty. These courses are designed with an immersive experience in mind and will also allow the learner to expand their artistic horizons using Juilliard's excellent educational expertise."

Not surprisingly, these classes don't seem like they will be "easy A's." The six online courses for JuilliardX are Discovering the Instruments of the Orchestra, Perform at Your Best: Foundations of Performance Psychology, Piano Preludes, How to Listen to Great Music for Orchestra, Music Theory 101, and Sharpen Your Piano Artistry. We spoke with Juilliard's managing director of operations, Courtney Blackwell Burton, to see why a school of such prestige would be willing to give away the goods for free while maintaining the highest quality possible.

"We were looking to expand the reach and the impact of our school without changing our on-campus curriculum," Burton says.

She describes these courses as "beginner and intermediate level courses that people around the world can take," but stresses that this curriculum will still stick to Juilliard's standards.

"There are really robust visual ways of communicating music theory concepts," she explains and is excited for the opportunity to "experiment with how technology can enhance performing arts education and how we can stretch technology to its limits in that way."

Burton hopes that these courses will act as a jumping off point for most students and that they will want to continue after they've completed these intermediate courses. For instance, the course How to Listen to Great Music for Orchestra is an interactive partnership with the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra that Burton describes as "a basic course for free which gives you some firm entry points into great orchestral masterworks." But if you choose to pay for the more advanced version of this course, you will certainly get your money's worth.

"If you want the full experience, where you're actually seeing the Berlin Philharmonic perform some of these pieces with interviews with the musicians," she says "then you can upgrade to get a verified certificate."

She believes that by offering these courses online, it will only strengthen Juilliard's reputation by increasing their reach.

"For us right now, we feel it is more important than ever to reach as many people as we can and technology is now at a point that is enabling that," says Burton.

Leave your dead-end job with free tech training

Does your "job" have to be just a "job?"

PAT KING
@MetroPhilly
patrick.king@metro.us

Have you ever stopped and thought to yourself "what am I doing with my life?" In other words, is the job that you've fallen into different than the career that you long for? It can be easy to find yourself in a professional rut and it can be just as hard to break out of it once you've found yourself there. So, what can you do to not only find a career that is relevant but also earn a great salary? New York City-based non-profit NPower is elevating those who may be dissatisfied in order to find great high paying jobs in the tech industry.

To find solutions to these problems Npower provides 15 weeks of half day classes combined with a seven-week paid internship (22 weeks in total) in order to accelerate the process of learning fundamental tech skills while gaining the valuable experience needed to break into the field. By partnering with big-name companies such as Cisco, HP, Accenture, JP Morgan and many others, Npower is helping students to work with some of the best in the industry. And with such recognizable names in the tech world as partners, Npower is only providing these companies with capable employees to meet their demand.

We spoke with the company's CEO, Bertina Ceccarelli, to see how NPower is helping people get out of their dead-end gigs and get the high paying tech jobs that they deserve. "We launched this work to help solve two problems," says Ceccarelli. The first problem she explains is "there are way too many young adults and veterans from underserved communities who don't have access to the kind of training opportunities for tech careers which catapults them into the digital economy." And second, that "there's just too narrow a pipeline of entry-level tech talent." So far, Npower's service has delivered on its process as they have found out that 80% of all of their students "get placed in some kind of full-time employment."

At its core, she believes that this service is for those who may have never had the chance to get a higher education or lack the means to get the training or experience necessary to make 180 degrees turn professionally. "This is a program that is geared towards those who are working, underemployed, working minimum wage jobs, or currently unemployed," says Ceccarelli. "We really want to target the service we provide to those in the US population who need it the most."

As of right now, NPower is offering courses in New York City, New Jersey, Texas, California, Toronto, Baltimore, and St. Louis, but they plan to expand more in the future. As Ceccarelli sees it, the company's growth is bound to happen as the job landscape changes. "The field is growing," says Ceccarelli since it is projected that "77% of all jobs by 2020 is going to some sort of technology skills."

3 Things we saw as Wentz, Eagles embarrass Cardinals

With four spectacular touchdown passes, Carson Wentz is looking more and more like a top NFL quarterback.

EVAN MACY
@evan_macy
evan.macy@metro.us

The Eagles put their foot on the throttle Sunday afternoon, using Carson Wentz's arm and the pass rush's motor to completely drub the Cardinals 34- and more to 4-1 on the year.

Here are some other things we won't be soon forgetting about the Eagles' Week 5 triumph:

1 Perfect Wentz, almost

Carson Wentz missed some throws to be sure, but the ones he made were spectacular Sunday as the Eagles' second year quarterback threw for 304 yards and four touchdowns.

Wentz started the scoring when he floated a high-arching pass to Trey Burton in the corner of the end zone to put Philly up 7-0 on Philly's opening drive. The score was the fourth for the Eagles in five games on their opening drive.

Later, Wentz stepped into the pocket to launch a 59-yard touchdown bomb to a wide open streaking Torrey Smith. A second bomb, this one to Nelson Agholor for 72 yards, solidified the Eagles' cake-walk victory as the speedy wide out ran down a deep pass and used an Allen Iverson-esque crossover move and spin to find his way into the end zone giving Philly a 31-7 lead.

Carson Wentz threw for four touchdowns for the first time in his career. GETTY IMAGES

Wentz did make some mistakes though, unnecessarily forcing a pass late in the first half that resulted in a Patrick Peterson interception in the corner of the end zone.

2 Sproles 2.0

Kenjon Barner always seems to fall through the cracks, and his performance Sunday left many wondering why? In a first quarter punt return Barner scampered for 76 yards to set up Philly's second score. He also filled in well for the injured Wendell Smallwood, gaining 23 yards on five carries. He had a key 16-yard run for a big first down in the first half.

The Philadelphia run game as a whole continued to roll, collecting 124 yards after running for over 400 in the last two games. LeGarrette Blount picked it up in the second half as he led the Eagles with 74 yards on the ground.

3 Locked in defense

The Eagles forced back-to-back-to-back three-and-outs in the first quarter to help amass their 21-0 lead before the first horn, thanks in very large part to intense pressure on Cardinals' Carson Palmer. Brandon Graham, Vinny Curry recorded sacks as the limited time for Palmer allowed the secondary to gel perfectly, battling balls left and right as Arizona did not gain a first down until the second quarter. The shut out was not meant to be, as John Brown did find paydirt on a slant route from Palmer to cut into Philly's lead, 21-7.

Wentz, Eagles convert third downs like nobody's business

It seems like it doesn't really matter what happens on first or second down anymore.

The Eagles went 9-for-14 on third down Sunday afternoon, in a dominating 34-7 win over the Cardinals. And Carson Wentz went 9-for-10 for 214 yards and three touchdowns.

Several times during the game, Wentz connected with a receiver on a third and long to either extend a drive or to find the end zone. Coming into the game ranked sixth in third down conversions (likely catapulting to the top 3 after this game), Wentz threw for 304 yards and four touchdowns in totality.

"Situational football is huge," Wentz, one of the league's best quarterbacks on third down said. "To be effective on third down, it helps the time of possession, it keeps the defense off the field. We call it the money down."

Talking about money — two wideouts earned big bucks with huge third-down plays in the win. Wentz stepped into the pocket to launch a 59-yard touchdown bomb to a wide open streaking Torrey Smith — on third down in a 21-point first quarter. A second bomb, this one to Agholor for 72 yards, came on a third-down play in the third quarter.

"Guys just made plays on the outside," center Jason Kelce, whom Wentz credits

Week 5 was certainly one of Nelson Agholor's most memorable as an Eagle. GETTY IMAGES

"There were some big plays made today that we expect — we don't want to be in those long situations, but we do expect to execute that way and hopefully stay on the field."

Eagles' head coach Doug Pederson for blocking two guys on the blitz pick up in the Agholor score, said. "When it's man to man coverage you put a lot on the receivers and quarterback to make plays. That one long pass to Nelly, the way he finished it off there with extra style in the end zone, that was fun to watch."

As a result of the consistency on third down, the Eagles once again flexed their league-best time of possession running the ball 33 times and passing it 30.

Philly was also good defensively on third downs, allowing just four of 14 attempts, giving the offense more chances to make plays.

"It's very big especially with the explosive offense that we have now," cornerback Jalen Mills said. "With the way those guys are playing whether it's running the ball or passing, we try and get them the ball as much as possible so they can put points on the board." EVAN MACY

NFL roundup: Giants, Steelers flop

There was no shortage of impressive individual performance and upsets in Week 5 action.

JOE PANTORNO

joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Jaguars 30, Steelers 9

In one of the most surprising results of the week, Ben Roethlisberger threw five interceptions against a solid Jaguars secondary with two of them being returned for touchdowns. Rookie running Leonard Fournette rushed for 181 yards on the day, including a 90-yard touchdown in the fourth quarter.

Chargers 27, Giants 22

Eli Manning's fumble with less than five minutes remaining set up Los Angeles' game-winning touchdown, a 10-yard connection from Philip Rivers to Melvin Gordon. The Giants are 0-5 for the second time since the 2013 season.

Panthers 27, Lions 24

The Panthers had to stave off a late comeback attempt from the Lions, who scored 14 fourth-quarter points to almost overturn a 27-10 deficit. After drawing within three with three minutes left, the Panthers were able to run the clock out after a big 17-yard completion from Cam Newton to Aries Count your pennies. Overspending would have severe consequences. Moderation and discipline will be your keys to greater prosperity.

Taurus Do what you can to get your responsibilities out of the way before you move on to personal plans. Schedule something that will help lessen your stress.

Gemini Inform demanding individuals that you have other responsibilities. Traveling or educational pursuits are in your best interest. Positive incentives will motivate you.

Cancer When dealing with matters that have the potential to affect your home or comfort, take precautions. Maintain balance by gaining the support needed to overcome adversity.

Leo Do whatever needs to be done on your own time, regardless of what others are doing. Your intellectual approach will bring you the success you are searching for.

Virgo Put an emotional situation to rest before it affects your productivity and an important relationship. Keep grievances to yourself and work alone.

Libra Getting along with others will be half the battle. Listen, offer suggestions and, most of all, stick to the truth. Much can be accomplished if you follow protocol.

Scorpio Make physical changes that will build your strength and help you feel ready to conquer whatever comes your way. Handle emotional regrets that hold you back.

Sagittarius Do whatever it takes to stabilize your life and relationships with the people who count. Nurturing and protecting your interests will counter emotional loss.

Capricorn You'll be tempted to rethink your beliefs if you fall prey to an unrealistic picture of a "perfect" lifestyle. Trust in what you know, not in what someone tells you.

Aquarius Fix up your place and tackle unfinished personal business that is holding you back. Discuss your plans and combat any negative input with a positive solution.

Pisces Know what you are talking about before you offer advice. You'll be blamed if you meddle in someone else's affairs. Don't go where you aren't welcome. EUGENIA LAST

JOIN THE FIGHT FOR THE FIRST ALZHEIMER'S SURVIVOR.

Why Walk to End Alzheimer's?

- 1 Alzheimer's is the sixth-leading cause of death in the U.S. and the only one of the top 10 that has no cure, can't be prevented or even slowed.
- 2 As many as 5.5 million Americans have Alzheimer's, including about 200,000 younger than 65.
- 3 The dollars you raise or donate will fund much-needed Alzheimer's research, plus care and support programs for the nearly 300,000 people in the Delaware Valley region who are affected by Alzheimer's or a related disorder.
